"ALMOST A RANCHER"

One-Reel Star Comedy

MR. BRONX, his wife, his baby and his dog, all are dreaming peacefully. A sudden shower comes up with amusing results as far as their slumbers are concerned. Mr. Bronx and his wife both do a sleep-walking stunt and fall off their sleeping porch.

Later, Mrs. Bronx tries to repair some books torn by the baby. She gets the pages mixed up, however, so that when she tries to look up how to take care of her baby in one book, she finds out all about tree farming. Likewise, father tries to learn about trees and is instructed in the art of nursing. Each does what the book says with side-splitting results.

A convention of panhandlers arrives. One of its members finds the Bronx home is a cinch and puts a chalk mark on the fence to indicate the easy graft. Baby, however, takes a piece of chalk and alters it to designate their house as sure death for hoboes. While stealing the blankets from the trees, the tramps are set upon by the Bronx's dogs and their clothes torn off.

After an amusing experience with the tramps trying to hide from a pair of constables by means of some fake trees, which they later walk off with, Mr. Bronx gets a good offer for the ranch and sells it.
